THE BROTHERHOOD OF ST. ANDREW

Seventh Annual Convention of the State Assembly

INTERESTING SESSIONS

Prominent Episcopal Clergymen From Different Parts of State Addressed the Convention—Election of Officers

The seventh annual convention of the Michigan state assembly of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew was held at the Episcopal church Saturday and Sunday, and was attended by 100 delegates from the different parts of the state. The delegates were served with luncheon at the Parish house Saturday at 1 o'clock by the ladies of the parish, and at 2:30 o'clock the convention was called to order in the parish house assembly room.

Rev. William Gardam, of Ypsilanti, led the opening service and before giving place to the presiding officer extended to the convention the welcome of the parish and their pastor, who were glad, he said, to proffer their hospitalities to the assembly, from the pleasure of acting as hosts and from the somewhat selfish reason that the presence of the convention will act as an inspiration to local Brotherhood work for the future. The Brotherhood has a splendid outlook, he said, in conclusion, and its return to fundamental principles gives added promise of a noble future.

President D. P. Sullivan, of Ypsilanti, made a few remarks by way of greeting, assuring the convention of the pleasure it afforded him to see the assembly in his own parish, and extending the welcome of the parish and vestry.

Dr. Porter, of Bay City, was called to the chair by President Sullivan to preside over the conference on "The True Scope of Brotherhood Work," and "Brotherhood Ideals," which occupied the rest of the session.

The speakers were F. J. Weber, of Detroit, Rev. N. H. Harrison, Elk Rapids, W. G. Reithard, Kalamazoo, Dr. Arnold, Detroit, and Rev. W. Warne Wilson, of Detroit.

A business session was held in the evening at which the council for the coming year was chosen as follows: D. P. Sullivan, of Ypsilanti; H. B. Lewis, of Elk Rapids; H. W. Strudley, Detroit; T. P. Clarke, Flint; Dr. C. F. Porter, Bay City; C. H. Perkins, Grand Rapids; J. S. Rogers, jr., Detroit; C. S. Scofield, St. Johns; E. H. Ayer, Detroit; W. Y. Reithard, Kalamazoo; G. B. Vernor, Detroit. The meeting adopted the recommendation of Secretary Strudley that the state be divided by the council into districts, that each member have territory for which he is individually responsible.

The later part of the evening was occupied with a devotional meeting led by Rev. C. E. Woodcock, of Detroit.

The delegates asesmbled at the church yesterday morning at 6:30 for holy communion, administered by Rev. William Gardam, and they attended the 10:30 service, at which a Brotherhood sermon was preached by Rev. J. N. McCormack, of Grand Rapids. Rev. Mr. McCormack took as his text Gallatians, sixth chapter, fourteenth verse, "But God forbid that I should glory, save in the cross of our Lord Jesus Christ," and from it gave an earnest talk on the purposes and aims that should animate Brotherhood men and all other Christian workers. In the afternoon F. J. Weber, of Detroit, presided over a conference at which the following program was carried out: "Chapter Work," W. B. Vredenburg, of St. Johns; "Lay Missions," J. A. Leighton, of Bay City; "Enlisting New Members," C. S. Scofield, of St. Johns; "Brotherhood Boys in the Sunday School," C. F. Porter, of Bay City.

One of the most interesting sessions of the convention was the conference of the junior chapters held from 4 o'clock to 5:30 Sunday afternoon, with B. G. Vernor, of Detroit, as presiding officer. Several hymns were sung and two of the Detroit young men, Walter Wing and William DeGraft, told of the work in their respective chapters. The young men are evidently thoroughly interested in the work, and they discussed the problems that meet a chapter and the best way of overcoming them, with a manner that showed unusual powers of observation and of judgment in persons of so few years. The afternoon's program was concluded with a question box conducted by H. W. Strudley, of Detroit, when many interesting points were brought up for general discussion.

The delegates attended the 7:30 evening service, at which Hubert Carlton, of Pittsburg, discussed "The Development of Man through Service" and F. S. Burrage, of Detroit, talked on "The Development of Men through Prayer." Both men have had large experience in Christian work and are able public speakers, with the result that the addresses were of unusual excellence.

The convention was closed with a farewell service at 9 o'clock, presided over by D. P. Sullivan, of Ypsilanti.

Detroit and Flint both asked the assembly for the honor of entertaining the next convention, but the matter was left to the council, who will announce their decision later. Among the prominent Episcopal clergymen of the state who attended the convention were Revs. C. A. Woodcock, of St. John's, Detroit; Arnold, of St. Peter's, Detroit; W. O. Waters, of St. Andrew's, Detroit; Warne Wilson, of St. Stephen's, Detroit; J. H. McCormack, of Grand Rapids; N. H. Harrison, of Elk Rapids; Tatlock, of Ann Arbor.

DEMOCRACY MAY GAIN

Because of Split in the Ranks of Republican Aldermen

EAST AND WEST SIDE

City Dads Are Marshalled Against Each Other—Street Commissionership the Bone of Contention

The split among the republican aldermen over the city appointments, is deepening, as the time for the organization of the new council approaches, and it is by no means an impossibility that the result will be the election of one or more democrats.

The four west side republicans are determined to allow the east side nothing, and the two east siders are contemplating, it is said, a bolt, which would mean that a prize or two would fall to the democrats. The bone of contention is Street Commissioner McPherson, whom the west side positively refuse to support, for the reason, it is claimed, that he is an east side man, and whom, therefore, Ald. Colby and Ostrander are particularly desirous of retaining.

Ald. Ainsworth, VanFossen, Berg and Brown are credited with having committed themselves to a policy excluding the east side in all possible ways from participation in the division of the city patronage, and in consequence Ald. Colby and Ostrander stand ready to block them at every turn. The alderman from the fourth is every inch a fighter, and is thoroughly posted in the fine points of aldermanic warfare, so with the backing of Ald. Ostrander, he is an antagonist whom the west siders will do well not to underestimate.

The tide may turn before Monday night, but at present there are prospects of the democrats landing the city attorneyship and the office of city treasurer, with the east side republicans in victorious possession of Street Commissioner McPherson and of Fire Chief Isaac Davis. City Clerk McLeod's chances of retaining his place are considered excellent, as neither of the republican factions is after his scalp.

The democratic aldermen have held one caucus, but little was done, and another is said to be slated for the near future.

MAKING A FIGHT FOR TIME

Property Owners Object to Improving of Cross St.

THE STREETS COMMITTEE

Had No Right to Order Work Done They Say—Matter May go Over Until New Council Meets

The proposed macadamizing of Cross street from Huron street to the Michigan Central depot, is meeting with strong opposition from the property owners, who are now fighting for time, as they are convinced that the new council will abide by the decision of those representing the majority of the frontage, and will rescind the resolution ordering the work, if only the contract is not let before the new council come into power.

In the fight for time the property owners have found what they consider a valuable weapon in Section 3 of Ordinance 54, defining the duties of the commissioners of public works, which states that the construction or repairing of any public work in the city except ordinary repairs, shall be done by the commissioners of public works, by letting the contract to the lowest bidder therefor, or in such manner as may be approved by the common council.

It is evident from this ordinance, say the Cross street property owners, that the streets and walks committee to whom was referred the macadamizing of the street, have no authority to undertake the work, as the resolution of the last council meeting would of course be superceded by an ordinance, amended, continued. Until the ordinance is amended, contend the opponents of the macadamizing, the streets and walks committee have no right to let the contract, so the matter must lay over until after the organization of the new council, which they expect will reconsider and rescind the resolution.

Even if the macadamizing of Cross street is not delayed, the contention of the disgruntled Cross street citizens is an interesting one, as the paving has always been done under the direction of the streets and walks committee. One of the former mayors, whose attention was called to the ordinance, said that if he had been aware of its existence when he was in office he would have insisted either on the repeal of the ordinance or that the paving be put in charge of the commissioners of public works. In his opinion the section very clearly places paving outside the authority of the streets and walks committee.

The macadamizing of Cross street is being strongly objected to by the teamsters of the city, who say that the snow and ice of winter will render the hill so slippery that it will be almost impossible to bring heavy loads up from the east side. They are unable to make use of Congress street a considerable part of the winter, they say, because the brick paving is too slippery, and they fear that macadamizing will have a similar effect upon Cross street. A business man who is interested in teaming, said yesterday afternoon that a petition will be presented to the council setting forth the position of the teamsters and asking that the resolution be rescinded. In the meantime the streets and walks committee will let the contract on Saturday, if they carry out the program they now have in mind.

The commissioners of public works have charge of the waterworks department and the street lighting, and the acquisition of the paving would make them the most important body in the city government outside of the council itself.

Those who brought the ordinance to light say they will make all efforts to bring about its enforcement or its repeal.

THE HIGH SCHOOL CHOIR CONCERT

The Ypsilanti High School choir gave its fifth annual concert in High School hall last Friday evening, under the direction of Mr. Arthur L. Bostick, the program consisting of Stainer's sacred cantata, "The Daughter of Jairus," rendered by the choir, and miscellaneous numbers by well known soloists.

The work of the choir was excellent and reflects great credit upon the director, Mr. Bostick. The chorus numbered 50 voices, and in attack and tone quality they were noticeably good. The soloists were the following popular local musicians: Miss Donna Riblet, soprano, Fred G. Ellis, Harold F. Spencer and Milton Cook, baritone. Miss Ruby Pratt and Miss Estella McFetridge were the accompanists. The chorus was assisted by the Conservatory String orchestra directed by Miss Abba Owen.

HOSTILE FEELING WAS ENGENDERED

At Republican Caucus Which was Held Friday Evening

LIVELY COUNCIL FIGHT

It will Probably Result This Year Over Distribution of City Offices

The republican members of the council held a caucus at the city clerk's office Friday evening to make out their slate for city attorney, city clerk and street commissioner, but it is said that hostile feeling developed between the east and west side representatives and that the meeting broke up without any action having been taken.

Ald. Colby and Ostrander, of the Fourth and Fifth wards respectively, are reported to have held out for the re-election of Street Commissioner McPherson, who is a Fifth warder, while the west siders are credited with having stated that they will under no circumstances give him their votes. There is also reported to be a difference of opinion as to the advisability of retaining Attorney Green and City Clerk McLeod.

The republicans have but the bare majority of six in the council so, unless they are unanimous in voting to oust the present officers, the latter will hold over, as the democratic minority of four is powerless to land their candidates, unless the republican split should bring them reinforcements.

The prospects are for a lively fight in the council this year between the east and west side aldermen, as the west side are of the opinion that the east siders had more than their share of the city patronage last year, and are determined to get it back at them.

FUGITIVE PERRIN HAS BEEN LOCATED

M. I. Perrine, the Ypsilanti young man who is wanted for attempted rape, has been located in Alabama, where he is engaged in telephone work.

It is said that he has effected a settlement with the young lady's family and that he will not be molested.

Perrine had a wife and a handsome child, and held a good position with the Michigan Telephone Co. in this city, when suddenly a complaint was lodged against him by one of the telephone girls for attempted rape. The young lady stated that as she was walking home on the close of her work one night, Perrine came up from behind and asked if he could walk along with her, as he was bound for the same direction. She consented, she said, and to her horror he attempted an assault when they came to a dark street back of the Central school building.

The girl screamed and passers by hurried up to find her in a hysterical condition, and feeling ran high against Perrine, who left for parts unknown before the warrant could be served.

CROSS STREET WILL BE PAVED

Ald. Worden is determined that the Cross street macadamizing shall go through without fail, so the city clerk has advertised for bids, which will be opened Saturday, May 3.

The new council does not convene until May 5, so the present streets and walks committee will have ample time to let the contract before they retire from office.

"I've helped let every paving contract so far," said Ald. Worden, yesterday, "and it looks as if this Cross street affair would be in shape before the new council comes in so the present streets and walks committee will have a hand in that."

Ald. Worden says that Ald. Colby was right in his statement before the council Monday, that the majority of the property owners on Congress street were opposed to the paving.

INVITED TO A ROUNDUP

"Teddy's Terrors" Send the President a Bid.

UNIQUE INVITATION FORWARDED

It Is Printed on the Hide of a Young Steer—The "Terrors" Are a Political Organization and Have a Most Novel Method of Campaigning. Their Watchword Is "Hi, Hi."

Out of the far and breezy "wild west" has been sent to President Roosevelt an invitation so unique that it is one of the most remarkable documents that ever went into the White House writes the Washington correspondent of the Buffalo News. It comes from a rough and ready campaign club known as "Teddy's Terrors" of Los Angeles Cal., and is written on a full sized calf hide, with the Roosevelt cattle brands burned on the flank. The queer "note" is a cordial request framed in cowboy phraseology for the chief executive's presence at the annual May fete, "La Fiesta de Los Angeles," a striking relic of the early Spanish occupation of California amplified to contain features of the New Orleans Mardi Gras. Among its attractions for the "tenderfeet" are feats of horsemanship, exhibitions of "broncho busting" and bullfights in modified form.

Near the shoulders of the calf hide which has been for months in the process of tanning and is as fine a specimen as could be found in California the hair was scraped away, leaving a soft spot of leathery parchment, upon which the words are written in a style that is in keeping with the western spirit and the frontier methods supposed to be in vogue there. This is the greeting:

Los Angeles, Cal., March 30.

We're goin' to have a roundup, an' we shore want yer mighty bad. Feed and water plenty. Stock's fat. Brandin' irons ready when yer git here. Come on, will yer? TEDDY'S TERRORS.

For Theodore Roosevelt, the President, Washington.

In the same spot is a laughable sketch of the president mounted on a bear, the insignia of the state of California, with his pistol holster flying out behind and a look of fierce determination on his stern face as he rushes to the rodero. In the distance is seen the dome of the national capitol and in the foreground a sign pointing toward Los Angeles.

The three brands that ornament the hide are those used on the president's cattle on his ranches in the northwest. They are the Maltese cross, the elk horn and the triangle, symbolic of the Mason, the Elk and the Knight of Pythias. The "Terrors" did not know the president's brands and were obliged to write to him for the information, and he may have suspected that some of his cattle would be missing, in view of the singular question. Within a few days a reply was received from Secretary Cortelyou and with it a characteristic memorandum in the president's own handwriting, saying, "I had three brands, the Maltese cross, elk horn and triangle." This was signed with his initials and bore rude drawings of the brands. The memorandum is stowed away in the club's archives and money could not buy it.

Inclosed in an envelope made of exquisitely polished California woods and bound with silver, the red and white calfskin souvenir has been forwarded for presentation to Mr. Roosevelt by Senators Perkins and Bard, and undoubtedly it will make a pleasant impression on the recipient, who thoroughly appreciates the frank and plain way of saying and doing things in the great southwest.

"Teddy's Terrors," sometimes called "Busters," are professional and business men organized in the campaign of 1900 in this novel way, their uniforms consisting of the typical cowboy outfit, sombrero, bandanna, blue flannel shirt, buckskin trousers and top boots and armed with huge revolvers. They go campaigning with a whoop and a howl, "shooting up" promiscuously, and nothing like them ever was turned loose before. Their watchword is "Hi, hi," which cattlemen call to the moving stock. Major J. W. F. Diss, a Philippine veteran, is "chief buster."

A New Dickens Controversy.

The facts of a man's life are very difficult to establish after his death. It now transpires that Mr. Percy Fitzgerald's article on Dickens which appeared in Harper's Magazine for April has called forth letters from members of the Dickens family in a controversy regarding Dickens' affairs of the heart which will in all probability never be settled, says Harper's Literary Gossip. Apropos of Dickens, it is stated that the Great White Horse hotel at Ipswich was sold at auction the other day, and many enthusiastic Dickens lovers attended the sale. This was the famous inn where Mr. Pickwick suffered the embarrassing encounter with the middle aged lady in the yellow curl papers.

A little life may be sacrificed to a sudden attack of croup, if you don't have Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil on hand for the emergency.

German Miles.

The mile in Germany is a somewhat puzzling measure. The explanation is that there are three kinds of miles—the German short mile, 6,859 yards; the German geographical mile, 8,237 yards, and the German long mile, 10,126 yards.

THE TOUCH DOES IT

Benson's Plasters are like your other friends—they hate to see you in pain or in weakness and are dog-tired hearing you complain about it. They want to cure you and send you along to your business—whole and happy. They can do it and will do it. Try them on. What for? Why for any cough or cold you may be troubled with, or any bothering pain or ache, or worry with kidneys or liver. Possibly some old clutch of muscular rheumatism renders an arm or a leg worth only half price just now. For anything that makes the machine work slow and stiff, with pain maybe in the motion of it, clap a Benson's Porous Plaster squarely on the bad spot. They are the get-out-to-morrow plasters—not the sort that go to sleep on your skin like a cat on a cushion. There is comfort and speedy relief in the touch of them. No other external remedy, no matter how made or how called, is worthy to live in the same street with Benson's Plasters. Pains and ailments melt away under them as a sheet of ice does under the Spring sun. You cannot foretell the weather but you can always foretell the effect of Benson's Plasters; it is as sure as the effect of a hot breakfast in a hungry man's stomach. But look out for substitutes. INTERESTING BITS OF SPORT TALK.

Maxey Long to Run Again—C. S. Titus' Trip to Henley In June.

Maxey Long, the greatest quarter mile runner that ever donned a spiked shoe, has decided to return to active competition. He retired from the cinder path a little more than a year ago, after having demonstrated his superiority over every sprinter in the world for all distances from 300 to 500 yards. He carried the colors of Columbia college and the New York Athletic club to victory so often that he was justly regarded as the most reliable runner that ever wore the Mercury Foot emblem.

It was at the earnest solicitation of his friends that Long consented to train again. Harry Lyons, the veteran half mile runner, was the man who finally prevailed upon the champion to return to the track. He had a hard time to get the consent of the famous runner, as Long had decided to devote all of his attention to business.

Lyons pointed out to him how foolish it was to retire at his age, when it was still possible for him to break two more records.

Long now holds the following world's records: Three hundred and fifty yards, straightaway, 36 2-5 seconds; 400 yards, straightaway, 42 1-5 seconds; 440 yards, straightaway, 47 seconds, and 440 yards, on a circular track, 47 4-5 seconds. All of these records were made in the fall of 1900. Long has also made the fastest time indoors from 300 to 440 yards. He is a good ten second man for the hundred, having won the national championship for 1900 in that time. He visited Europe in 1901 and won many races.

Long is now training at Travers Island, N. Y., and expects to be in fairly good condition for the games of the New York Athletic club in June. If he is fit by that time, he will try for either the 500 or 600 yard record. The record for the former is 57 4-5 seconds and for the latter 1m. 11s. Both records are held by T. E. Burke of Boston.

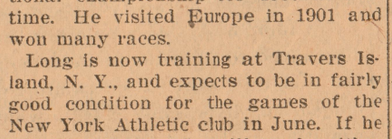
America this year will be represented in the great Henley regatta on the Thames, England, by C. S. Titus, one of the best scullers ever developed in this country. Titus earned the right to compete abroad by his splendid victory in the national regatta in Philadelphia last year.

In this race he beat the best oarsmen in this country and Canada, winning in the record time of 9m. 46s. The previous record for the race, held by E. H. Ten Eyck, was 9m. 53s.

Titus is a member of the Union Boat club of New York and trains on the Harlem river. He pulls a clean and steady stroke with a wide sweep which carries him through the water at a remarkably fast pace.

Titus first became known as a member of the Young Men's Gymnastic club of New Orleans. He is splendidly developed, also being a clever gymnast.

He will continue his training on the Harlem river until a few days before June 15, when he will sail for England. His training abroad before the race will be done at Putney. The Henley regatta is scheduled for July 8, 9 and 10. Titus expects to return in time for the National regatta at Worcester, Mass., where he will row against Ten Eyck for the national championship.



The schedule of prominent golfing championship tournaments has been announced as follows by the United States Golf association:

May 6, 7, 8, 9 and 10—Intercollegiate championship at Garden City, Long Island, N. Y.

CHAPTER IX.

A FEW WORDS WITH MR. ROBINSON.

DETECTIVE ELMENDORF was a man who considered himself to be the simple product of chance. He was born in Danbury, Conn., and at the age of nine years he was left an orphan and penniless. Immediately after this misfortune, as he did not like the people with whom he was expected to live, he walked out of town. There happened to be a high wind that day, and the boy walked with it, because the contrary course would have been disagreeable.

No one made any attempt to bring him back, and so he tramped for about a week, eating nothing one day and six good meals the next, according to the varying charity of the people along the road. Finally an eccentric old doctor in a certain small town found the boy ill on his doorstep one morning, and that was a great piece of luck for young Elmendorf. He had a good home in the doctor's house for eight years, without care or labor; enjoyed the advantages of the excellent schools of the village, and was nearly ready to enter college when his benefactor died.

The doctor left a good property, but no will. Relatives swooped down like a flock of birds. Elmendorf had not been adopted. He had no legal status, and one day he discovered that he had nothing at all except a trunkful of decent raiment and the sum of $3.60. The coincidence that this was the exact fare to New York decided Elmendorf's course. He arrived in the metropolis without a penny, hunted up a boarding house near the station, carried his trunk there on his shoulder and then went out to look for work.

He had many occupations in the next five years, but none to his liking. Finally he became a clerk in a small hotel which was a haunt of ward politicians. Yielding to the temptation thus thrown into his way, he developed into a lieutenant of the district leader, learning more tricks than he had the hardihood to play and prospering the less because of his scruples.

It became a delusion with him, however, that he was one of the most dishonest of created beings; that he would do anything for money, and that only his hard luck prevented him from selling his soul at a good figure. Once when his affairs were at a low ebb his patron suggested the police, and Elmendorf became a member of the force in the firm belief that a corrupt man like himself could make money therein. But he had a perverse way of being dissatisfied with temptation, and he gained a reputation for honesty which his best friends deplored. It was pure chance, a matter not worthy of mention, which secured his transfer to the staff of the detective bureau. He had no appetite for the work, yet he must have possessed a certain fitness for it. Perhaps the advantage of early mental training, added to an unfailing memory and a perception of little things that was due to the German blood in him, helped to make a real detective of him.

Yet there is no money in detecting alone and but small advancement, as Elmendorf well knew. What one needs is the skill to construct a good, strong "pull," coupled with the capacity to turn the incidents of the profession to one's personal advantage. In these important particulars Elmendorf was a dire failure. He secured no pull, and he was forced to live almost entirely upon his salary. Indeed his continuance on the staff was due largely to the favor in which he was held by certain men connected with the press. The feeling that if Elmendorf should be sent back to patrol duty somebody would get "roasted" for it long and hard in at least two of the big papers was the deciding factor in his case on several occasions.

He was useful, however, in affairs like that with which the present record has to do, where early rumor connected persons of prominence and wealth with criminal cases and it was desirable to have a prompt and honest report as a basis for subsequent action.

In the matter of the murderous attack upon Elsie Miller, Elmendorf received orders, on the morning of the day following that upon which the crime was committed, to "look up" John Robinson. It appeared that Robinson had left the house on Thirty-eighth street immediately after Alden's departure, which he had viewed with every indication of intense and painful excitement.

No obstacle was put in the way of his departure when he desired to go; but an unobtrusive young man of Captain Neale's retinue walked upon the other side of the street. Robinson did not see this young man—which is sometimes a great misfortune for the person thus attended—but it happened, in this instance, that after a considerable amount of pedestrian exercise of a seemingly aimless sort the young man did not see Robinson, and this was undoubtedly a serious misfortune for the "shadow." He was roundly sworn at by his superior, when, after a fruitless search, he was obliged to announce his failure to that individual. He did not do this, of course, until he had waited a long time in front of the house where Robinson lived. Had Robinson returned there the "shadow" would have given, in his subsequent report, a full statement covering every detail of Robinson's movements and every minute of the time, and would cheerfully have sworn to it in court had later events made such a proceeding necessary. But, failing to "pick up" Robinson, there was no escape from confession.

The landlady of the boarding house where Robinson lived said that he was somewhat irregular in his habits and that he did not always come home to dinner; but when at 2 o'clock in the morning it was reported that he had not appeared Captain Neale began to be uneasy. As he expressed it, "If Robinson has skipped, there'll be nothing doing."

Translated this meant that if a humble clerk of unknown antecedents had stained his soul with crime for $500 there remained only the profitless task of catching him and sending him to jail.

Elmendorf had no idea that Robinson had "skipped," principally because there was no apparent reason for it. The clerk had delivered the note to Elsie and had then left the house, as the testimony of the servant, a reliable woman long in Mrs. Simmons' employ, satisfactorily proved. That Robinson had immediately returned and committed the atrocious crime for a reward so small was, in Elmendorf's opinion, a wild hallucination, though he had heard such a hypothesis stated. But that Robinson's extreme agitation when brought to the scene was due to a more intimate knowledge of the affair than he had disclosed was a much more reasonable proposition.

As to the money in the note, Elmendorf was far from regarding it as the motive for the crime. He believed that the money had been there, for that was one of the few points upon which Elsie had made a positive declaration in her first response to questions, as Elmendorf had been informed by Kendall in their earliest interview at the hospital. She had said that she had removed the money and had laid it, with the note, upon the table. It had been stolen, but probably as a "blind," unless, indeed, some person connected with the police had comforted an itching palm with it.

Upon receiving his orders in regard to Robinson the detective went down town to the building in which Alden's offices were situated. He took up an inconspicuous position near by and after half an hour of waiting had the pleasure of wishing Mr. Robinson good morning upon the sidewalk at a point about one hundred feet from the building. This was unfortunate for Captain Neale's man, Barnes, who was waiting in the doorway.

Elmendorf made no secret of his identity or of his errand, and Robinson seemed quite undisturbed.

"I was pretty badly upset yesterday afternoon," he said. "It was all so sudden and shocking. Of course I had no special interest in Miss Miller. Probably I haven't seen her more than three or four times in my life. But to think that this should have happened so soon after I had left her! I tell you it gave me a turn. I didn't feel much like being alone, so I went to see a fellow whom I know and spent the night in his rooms. How is Miss Miller this morning?"

Elmendorf replied that his advices were altogether favorable, and little more was said until they had entered Alden's private office, in which Robinson had a desk.

"I thought you knew Miss Miller quite well," said Elmendorf, taking a chair. "You spoke of her by her first name yesterday."

"Did I?" said Robinson, opening his eyes wide. "Well, I might have said almost anything yesterday. I was nervous, and that's a fact."

"How did it happen that you took the note?"

"Why, Mr. Alden was going to ring for a messenger boy," was the reply, "and then he mentioned that there was money in the note and asked me about one of our own boys, who happened to be out at the time. So I said I'd take the note. I wanted to go up to my room, and it's only a little way from where Miss Miller lived. I hadn't anything particular to do at the time."

"What did you want to go to your room for?"

"To get a letter I had left there," replied Robinson. "Nothing of any great importance."

"Came for you in the morning, I suppose, and you forgot to bring it down," said Elmendorf, with the air of one who hastens to dismiss a subject.

"Yes; that was it."

"Did you get it?"

"Why, certainly."

"Where is it now?" demanded the detective.

Robinson's forehead began to perspire.

"I destroyed it," he said.

"Who wrote it?"

"Why, what has that to do with"—

"Who wrote it?" said Elmendorf, tapping on the floor with his cane.

"Fellow over in Philadelphia," replied Robinson, "But I don't see"—

"Give me his name and address," said the detective, taking out a notebook and a pencil.

"This is private business," rejoined Robinson, mopping his face. "It has nothing to do with this affair."

"My dear sir," said Elmendorf, "in a case of this kind, when a man begins to lie, it's always important. I happen to know that you haven't had a letter come to that house since you've been living there, so you didn't go up town to get one. In my opinion, you went up because you wanted to see Miss Miller. Isn't that a fact?"

"You put me in a mighty bad place," replied Robinson. "Suppose I say that I did, how would that strike Mr. Alden?"

"It won't strike him at all," said Elmendorf, "because I shan't tell him. I don't mean to intimate that you had anything particular to say to Miss Miller. But you'd seen her, you knew she was a very pretty and agreeable girl,

"Did I?" said Robinson, opening his eyes wide.

and, like any other man, you didn't object to seeing her again even if it was only for four seconds. That's all there is in it. So why not tell the truth?"

"I don't deny that I had some such idea."

"It was your motive for offering to take the note, and you had no other. Isn't that a fact?"

"Well, yes," replied Robinson, "between ourselves, that's the truth."

"You had no errand at your room?"

"Of course not."

"Then why did you go there?" demanded Elmendorf. "Why did you go straight over there from Miss Miller's house?"

"I thought I'd change my clothes," said Robinson desperately.

"Did you change them? Haven't you got on the same suit now that you wore down town yesterday?"

"Yes," said Robinson. "I—I changed my mind."

"Instead of your clothes," rejoined Elmendorf, with a smile. "By the way, where were you born?"

Robinson's expression revealed some slight relief.

"In Honolulu," he said. "I lived there until I was 21. Then my parents moved to Amoy, China. I came to this country about two years ago."

"Where did you land?"

"San Francisco."

"Date of arrival and name of steamer?" said Elmendorf, taking up his notebook again.

Robinson was undisturbed this time.

"I've forgotten the exact date," he said, "and the steamer was a tramp. I can't recall her name."

Asked what he had done in San Francisco, Robinson replied that he had drifted across the continent immediately, arriving in New York in April, a year ago. Very soon afterward he had had the good fortune to make the acquaintance of Mr. Alden, who had taken a liking to him and given him his present position. He had few friends in this country. There was no one who knew him better than Alden did.

"You looked to me like a college bred man," said Elmendorf, whereupon Robinson replied that there were excellent schools in Honolulu.

Elmendorf traced out a pattern in the rug with the end of his cane. "The man has a record," he was saying to himself. "This story is a work of art. No cable to Honolulu, and Amoy is a long way from Mulberry street. It will take about six months to prove that this man never lived in the Sandwich Islands unless we can strike his trail around here."

"Did you carry that cane yesterday?" asked Elmendorf suddenly, and Robinson promptly went into a blue chill which he strove to conceal.

"Yes—of course—no," he stammered. "I think that was what I went to my room for."

"I think it wasn't," said Elmendorf, and at that moment, to the surprise of both, Alden entered the room.

A Night With a Ghost

Hair Raising Experience Of a Man In Haunted House

Weird tales are being told of a haunted house in the little village of Carroll, Ind., and the stories of ghostly happenings are apparently backed up by the very best of evidence—that of persons who have seen the spirit and beheld its work. The house is owned by a resident of the village, Frank Yater. It is an ordinary dwelling, with nothing about it to suggest the supernatural. Mr. Yater has had dozens of tenants, but none would stay. Six months ago he announced that any one who would move into the house could have it rent free for a year. In three months eight tenants had moved in and as quickly moved out again.

In some respects the stories of all the tenants tally. Footsteps are heard at all hours of the day and night, doors open and close without any visible agency, the crashing sound of dishes comes from the dining room when there is no one in it, groans of the most agonizing character are heard, while many have actually seen the spectral visitant, a being so terrifying in appearance that the spectators do not even like to tell of it.

Mr. Lape, who has to his credit the longest tenancy of the haunted house, tells some marvelous stories of his experiences. The house had been untenanted for some time when Mr. Lape took it, and the night before his family was to arrive he took possession and decided to spend the night there. He had a bed, table, chair and lamp moved into one of the rooms on the lower floor and built himself a fire in the grate. Having an utter disbelief in the supernatural, he felt no fears as to any probable visitors and was, in fact, rather in hopes that some would appear so that he might expose the mischievous pranks of some of the neighbors. Mr. Lape had a fox terrier, an animal with the most intense curiosity and a disposition to nose around in corners and out of the way places, and this he took along with him.

On arriving at the house Mr. Lape's attention was directed to the peculiar actions of the dog. As a general thing the animal was disposed to roam ahead of his master, and when the door of the house was opened he darted in. He immediately darted out again and betrayed a manifest disposition to run away. He came back at Mr. Lape's command, however, but kept close to the latter's heels, all the while showing the greatest uneasiness.

Having completed his preparations, Mr. Lape sat down near the table containing the lamp and began to read the paper. The dog had taken a position on the floor in front of the grate fire, but his head still kept moving about, as if following the actions of some person, and his eyes were set.

It was nearly 12 o'clock when Mr. Lape distinctly heard the sound of footsteps in the adjoining room. He arose softly and moved toward the door of communication, which he had locked and the key of which he held in his hand. His intention was to suddenly throw open the door and catch the mortal visitant that he was sure was there. As he reached the door, however, he was amazed to see it noiselessly open in spite of the fact that it had been locked. Mr. Lape was not daunted by this fact and boldly walked into the room, the dog all the time at his heels. The sound of footfalls still continued, yet by the light of the lamp which Mr. Lape carried in his hand he could see that the room was vacant.

At one of the farther corners of this room was a door that opened into the hall, and toward this Mr. Lape moved. As he did so the footsteps seemed to move directly in front of him, and on looking down on the floor, which was thickly carpeted with dust, Mr. Lape was amazed to see the imprint of a naked human foot made before him as the footsteps moved. Arriving at the farther door, it swung open as noiselessly as the other had done, although it had been locked by Mr. Lape. The footsteps moved steadily and audibly along the hall, leaving their trail of impressions in the dust, and went up the stairs. Mr. Lape followed in time to see the door of one of the bedrooms open noiselessly and then close again. The trail of footprints led to this door, yet when Mr. Lape reached it it was locked securely. He opened it with a key which he had with him, but the room was empty. There was no other door by which it could be entered, and the only other egress from it was by the window, which was securely fastened.

When Mr. Lape turned to go out of the room, he found the door closed. He heard no sound of closing and had left the key in the lock on the other side when he opened it. He set his lamp down and tried to force the door open, but couldn't budge it. When thoroughly exhausted with efforts to get out of the trap in which he had been captured, Mr. Lape paused, with the intention of getting out of the window. As he picked up the lamp from the floor he was surprised to see the door slowly and quietly open, and then he walked down stairs. There he found all the doors closed and locked, although he had left them open when he went up stairs.

Most men would have had enough by this time, but Mr. Lape had his "dander up," as he expresses it, and was resolved to see the show out. He again placed the lamp on the table and sat down by it to read one of the papers he had brought along. His reading was soon interrupted by a sensation of intense cold, and at the same time the light from the lamp began to grow dimmer and dimmer. Not only the lamp, but the fire in the grate began to grow dim, while in the air before him what appeared like a cloud, with the outlines of a human form, was visible.

Mr. Lape's attention was now attracted to the dog, which had forsaken his position in front of the fire and had sneaked to the farthest corner of the room. There he stood with his back to the wall, every muscle strained, as if about to leap on something, his hair erect and his teeth bared, while the froth dropped from his lips. Mr. Lape called to him, but the animal paid no attention. Then Mr. Lape's attention was called from the dog to the cloud-like shape that was before him and to which he attributed the intensely cold feeling that affected him. From this cloudy shape could be plainly seen two eyes—eyes that were the essence of malignity and devilish hate. The light had grown so dim that the room was by this time almost in darkness. Once or twice Mr. Lape said that he felt an icy clutch at his throat, but this he brushed away.

"If I had betrayed the least fear," he said, "I am certain I would now have been a dead man."

This horrible appearance was in the room, as near as Mr. Lape can reckon, about fifteen minutes. Then the cloudy shape disappeared, and the figure of a young and beautiful woman was seen sitting at the table where Mr. Lape had sat. She appeared to be in the deepest distress and groaned and wrung her hands in agony. The woman sat thus for several minutes and then, rising, moved toward the door leading into the hall and vanished.

Immediately the lamp, which had been burning so dimly, blazed up to its natural flame, and the fire in the grate became bright again. Mr. Lape then looked toward the corner where the dog had stood and saw the animal lying down as if sleeping. The dog did not answer to his call, and when he walked over to it and stooped down to pat it he found that the poor animal was dead. This was all that Mr. Lape could stand, and he left his house.

Dallas Crume, another of the tenants, is a nervy and original young man who recently married and started housekeeping in the haunted house. One bright afternoon he heard a noise in the parlor, and on turning he was positive he saw the dim head and shoulders of a woman dodge behind an open door. He kept his eye on the door until he secured his camera. Then he seated himself in a rocking chair in the room with the supposed ghost, ready to take a snapshot should the apparition again appear. Mr. Crume said it did appear—came from behind the door and quickly glided behind the dresser just as he pressed the button. His surprise was intense when the photographer developed the plate and showed him a photo of himself seated in the parlor holding a camera, just as he did on that day.

WHY BEEVES ARE FEW

Reasons For Scarcity In Spring Cattle Supply Explained.

LARGELY DUE TO DROUGHT.

Shortage of Feed Caused by That of Last Summer—Unusual Conditions Affecting the Market In the Plains Regions—Effect of Reduction of the Free Range.

In view of the high prices for beef now prevailing in most parts of the country, the following article on the scarcity of beef cattle is of interest:

An abnormal condition exists in the cattle industry of the west, says the Kansas City correspondent of the New York Evening Post. It is entering on the new grass season with remarkably high prices for fat cattle, and yet there have been very low prices, comparatively, for "stockers." This condition has obtained over Kansas, Missouri, parts of Nebraska, Iowa and Oklahoma. It affects the market at Kansas City and at other points for reception of western range stock. Fat cattle sold in Chicago the other day for the highest figure since 1882. It was laid at the door of the packers' combination, and to a degree that was true reasoning. But back of the packers' combination and making that sort of movement possible to a large degree has been the unusual history of the cattle production of the plains in the last half decade.

The immediate cause of the shortage of fat cattle from the range region is the drought of last season extending over Kansas, Missouri, Oklahoma and parts of Iowa, Nebraska and Colorado. The corn crop of the section affected was cut down four-fifths, and the rough feed question became a serious one for most of the farmers. The farmers sold all their cattle that could be spared, thinning the herds down to what could be cared for during the winter without fattening, and did not buy any stock for feeding. There was abundance of money for stock fattening purposes. Cattle paper was sought by the eastern banks and investors, and the western banks had the largest deposits in their history. But the farmers could not feed 30 cent corn and make returns and could not get rough feed. So trainloads of cattle went out of the farming section to the far northwest for the winter or were slaughtered when out of condition.

Kansas City and Topeka marked a shortage as early as March 1. Chicago was sensible of the smaller receipts of fat stock from the plains during the weeks following, and as the days have gone on the shortage has become more noticeable. It is not so much that the number of cattle on the plains is lessened as that the number fattened last year was below the usual proportion. The low point in the western cattle business came five years ago. The low prices had discouraged breeders, and the ranches were stocked less heavily than for two decades. When good cows were selling at auction for $20 and two-year-olds were worth less than the feed that had been given them, what could the farmer see for the future? But the revival of business in the east made a better market, and the farmers of the prairie states awoke to the fact that they could make money out of stock. They also learned that it was good business for them to mingle agriculture with stock raising. The report for 1900 of the government showed that the southwest cattle region had the following number of range cattle, exclusive of milk cows:

	Number.	Average price.	Value.
Texas	4,352,241	$17 86	$77,736,384
New Mexico	659,849	18 64	12,301,571

Arizona	362,721	16 46	5,969,293

Since that time the number has increased rather than diminished. The removal of the government land from free range has been one of the burdens of the ranchmen. It has compelled them to purchase land if they would remain in the business and consequently has made smaller ranches. The taking of the Comanche, Apache and Kiowa reservations from the range last summer was another feature in the shortage, for fully 200,000 cattle were sacrificed as a result of this action. Owing to the western movement of settlers a large amount of Texas and Kansas land has been taken out of the list, and even in Nebraska there is complaint of a discrimination against the cattlemen and in favor of the settler, which does not appear to the average individual as very wrong. All of these things have diminished the cattle supply for the spring market and has made possible the results of the combination of interests among the packers. There is likely to be little change until the cattle that are put on grass can be fattened for market. A corn crop must be harvested in this section of the west before there can be a resumption of the feeding. With the large amount of money seeking investment in the west farmers will have no trouble in floating cattle paper, and the coming of a corn crop will probably see more feeding than ever before in the history of the prairie states.

Mule Growing a New Hoof.

Some time ago a mule belonging to John Thompson, a stock dealer of Sullivan, Ind., accidentally tore its left hind foot entirely off. The leg was placed in a sling, and the mule is now growing a new hoof, says the Indianapolis News. It is about an inch long.

New Style In Eggs.

Judge Stevenson has a hen that started in in January laying eggs of regulation shape. Her last effort surprised her proprietor, says the Georgetown (O.) News-Democrat. It resembles a kidney bean, only it is much larger.

THE SENTINEL-COMMERCIAL

ISSUED ON THURSDAY.

$1.00 Per Year, Strictly in Advance.

tered at the Postoffice in Ypsilanti, Michigan as second class matter.

THURSDAY, MAY 1, 1902.

It is not exactly the regulation Philippine "water cure" that has made General Funston too full for utterance but the remedy is quite as effective.

The attorney general of the United States some time ago directed certain United States district attorneys to investigate the alleged meat trust and report to him. These reports have convinced the attorney general that there is such a thing as a meat trust and that it is operating in restriction of trade and an increase in the cost of this necessity of life. He is convinced that the trust is a law breaker and he has therefore ordered proceedings to be commenced against the trust. An injunction suit will be started under the provisions of the interstate commerce law. The people will wish him success and that some means will be found to enforce the law and prevent the grasping meat combine from cutting this article of diet from the bill of fare of the people.

President-elect Palma of Cuba is meeting with a most enthusiastic reception on his return to his native country from which he was banished many years ago by Spanish authority. He returns now the chosen head of the new government. He says before entering upon the duties of his new office he will ask that all Americans under prison sentence, in Cuba, be pardoned before the Cuban republic is launched. It is said that Secretary Root has been asked by the municipal council of Havana to pardon the American alluded to by President Palma. This is certainly a gracious act, but some of the Americans mentioned little deserve such treatment. Still this will be a good point at which to start off the new government. It is a mark of wisdom that the Cuban officials should desire all these possible points of friction removed before the new government starts upon its duties.

DRIVING CLUB LEASED FAIR GROUNDS

The Ypsilanti Race and Fair association has been changed in name to the Ypsilanti Driving club and Henry D. Platt and Martin Dawson have been directed to lease the fair grounds for one year, as trustees of the club, with the privilege of a second year.

The club will have entire control of the grounds and in addition to the two race meetings and the fall fair decided upon at the previous meeting, they will hold frequent matinee races and horse shows. They will make liberal terms with base ball and foot ball teams, and it is hoped to revive the popularity of the grounds for athletic purposes.

STUDY CLUB WILL VISIT DETROIT

The Ladies' Study club will go to Detroit in a body tomorrow evening to hear Mme. Sofja Friedland, of Moscow, Russia, lecture before the Mother's Congress on "The Evolution of the Russian Woman."

The club have been studying Russia this year, and they decided to attend Mme. Friedland's lecture instead of holding their proposed open meeting.

The ladies will meet in the vestibule of the Woodward Avenue Baptist church at 7:30 and will return together at the close of the lecture.

Mme. Friedland is an able speaker and a woman of ability, and practically the entire club will make the trip to hear her.

NEXT CITY ATTORNEY A DEMOCRAT

"There is a report about that you will not accept the office of city attorney for another year," said a reporter to City Attorney Fred W. Green this morning.

"Under no conditions will I accept," was the reply. "I am going to devote all my time to booming Ald. John Van Fossen for the legislature."

Attorney Green's statement has an important bearing on the disagreement of the republican aldermen over the city offices, as it practically means that the city attorney for the coming year will be a democrat. Whether it is J. P. Kirk, T. L. Towner or L. N. Brown who will draw the plum, remains to be seen.

MARRIAGE LICENSES.

The following have been granted licenses to marry:

Ernest Hurth, 34, Lodi; Bertha Mayer, 22, Lodi.

Wm. Kelly, 42, Chelsea; Johanna Zulky, 26, Chelsea.

A POPULAR SCRIBE TAKES A BRIDE

Howard E. Pratt, a former Ypsilanti young man and a graduate of the high school, now city editor of the Marshall Statesman, became a Benedict Saturday evening, the bride being Miss Mabel Woolsey, a popular young lady of Marshall. The marriage was solemnized at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. G. S. Woolsey, in the presence of 90 friends and relatives, and was one of Marshall's most brilliant weddings of the year.

The best man was G. A. Collins, of Lansing, a former Ypsilantian and a high school classmate of the groom, and the maid of honor was Miss Ruby Pratt, of this city, the groom's sister.

The bride was the deputy county clerk of Calhoun county, and is prominent in the literary and social circles of Marshall.

Mr. Pratt removed to Chicago after graduation, and after the war with Spain, in which he served, he entered newspaper work at Charlotte. His rise was rapid and after work in Niles he went to Marshall, in a short time becoming city editor and part owner of the Statesman. He is a musician of ability and is very popular in Marshall society.

MRS. YOUNGS ON DECK AGAIN

She Marries Foster Kilpatrick and Trouble Results

A SEWING MACHINE

Plays an Important Part in Civil Suit Begun Against the New Made Bride

The Youngs perpetual injunction case has of itself left the boards, as Mrs. Youngs is happily married to Foster Kilpatrick, who was perpetually enjoined from speaking to her, but its influence is at work, with the result that the little town of Maybee is witnessing a lively civil suit due solely to the Youngs affair.

The Youngs children boarded for some time with one of the brothers-in-law named Hayden, and as security for the pay Mr. and Mrs. Youngs left a $20 sewing machine, promising to settle the bill of $30 as soon as they were able. In the meantime trouble occurred [illegible] and the children left the Hayden family, while the opening of chapter No. 3 revealed the fact that a relative of Mrs. Kilpatrick, Greisehopper by name, had caused the machine to be conveyed to his own home.

Hayden has replevined the machine to obtain satisfaction for the $30 worth of board the small Youngs are alleged to have absorbed, and through sympathy for Mrs. Youngs, who is the owner, Greisehopper is fighting the case. The case was set for yesterday, but Attorney L. N. Brown returned last evening with the information that it had been adjourned until the middle of May.

Maybee and the environs are shaken to their foundations by the suit, which has split the community into two factions, who take their stand on the general merits of the Youngs case and the particular justice in the wife's being obliged to lose her sewing machine to settle the children's board bill.

The former Mrs. Youngs is at present living with her husband, Kilpatrick, in the northern part of the state.

JOTTINGS FROM WEBSTER

Mrs. W. F. Morrison and Miss French are at North Lake.

Mrs. Sears very pleasantly entertained the Webster Missionary society on last Thursday.

Mrs. Frank Leslie, of Denton, came to attend the funeral of Mrs. Austin Smith.

A social for the benefit of the Congregational church will be held Thursday evening at the parsonage. A cordial invitation is extended to all.

A very sad funeral occured at the Congregational church on Friday last, it being that of Mrs. Ida Smith Backus, who one year ago moved with her husband and family to Fruitdale, Ala. She leaves besides a husband four children—Emory, Elsie and Lois and an infant daughter—to mourn her loss. Rev. Mr. Morrison conducted the services, and the body was laid at rest in the family lot.

FAIR EXCHANGE.

A New Book for an Old One—How it is Done in Ypsilanti.

The back aches at times with a dull indescribable feeling; making you weary and restless; shooting pain shoots across the region of the kidneys, and again the loins are so lame to stoop is agony. No use to rub or aplly a plaster to the back in this condition. You cannot reach the cause. Exchange the bad back for a new and stronger one. Follow the example of this Ypsilanti citizen:

Mrs. J. M. Hart, of 104 E. Congress St. (Mr. J. M. Hart, barber), says: "I do not hesitate to endorse Doan's Kidney Pills. I believe them to be an excellent remedy. I was annoyed for some time with a dull aching pain in my back and frequent attacks of dizziness. I was advised to try Doan's Kidney Pills and got them at Weinmann & Matthews' drug store. I must say that I derived a lot of benefit from them."

For sale by all dealers, price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the U. S. Remember the name—DOAN'S—and take no other.

STUDY CLUB HONORS MRS. GOODRICH

The Ypsilanti Study club has been greatly favored in having one of its members, Mrs. Lydia DeCamp Goodrich, appointed an alternate to the National Federation of Women's Clubs which meets in Los Angeles May 8.

This is a much esteemed honor as there are only eight delegates and a corresponding number of alternates appointed from Michigan. Mrs. Goodrich, who is the mother of Mrs. Frank Worden, of this city, is a life member of the Grand Rapids Ladies' Literary society.

Mrs. Brabb, also a member of the Study club, left with Mrs. Goodrich for the west with the Michigan delegation on Saturday last.

ORATORS' LEAGUE CONTEST

The fifth annual contest of the Michigan Oratorical League will be held in Normal hall, Friday evening, under the auspices of the Normal Oratorical association.

The participants will be eight, one each representing Michigan Agricultural college, Albion, Kalamazoo, Olivet, Hilsdale, Adrian, Hope and the Normal.

The representative of the Normal will be Miss Mabel Eagle, of Dayton, O., whose oration is on Lincoln. Miss Eagle is a young lady of marked intellectual ability with a decided gift for oratory and her eulogy of Lincoln, which was given at the recent college oratorical contest, is a production of great merit. She has a pleasing voice and manner of delivery and should win a high rank in any college contest.

Musical numbers will be furnished Friday evening by Normal Conservatory students.

CONDEMNED IN MISSOURI AND CONFISCATED IN NEW YORK.

Judge Clark of St. Louis has convicted and fined heavily a number of grocers for selling baking powder containing alum.

The week before the Health Department of New York seized a quantity of stuff being sold for baking powder which they found was made from alum mixed with ground rock, and dumped it into the river.

The Health Authorities are thus taking effective means to prevtn the introduction into our markets of injurious substitutes in place of wholesome baking powders.

As alum costs only two cents a pound, there is a great temptation for those manufacturers who make substitutes and imitation goods, to use it. Alum baking powders can be detected by the health authorities by analysis, but the ordinary housekeeper, whose assistance in protecting the health of the people is important, cannot make a cehmical examination. She may easily know the alum powders, however, from the fact that they are sold at from ten to twenty cents for a pound can, or that some prize—like a spoon, or glass, or piece of crockery, or woden ware—is given with the powder as an inducement.

As the people continue to realize the importance of this subject and consumers insist on having baking powder of established name and character, and as the health authorities continue their vigorous crusades, the alum danger will, it is hoped, finally be driven from our homes.

A BEAUTIFUL ART EXHIBIT

The Sketch Club Show Dainty Samples of Their Work

IN LIBRARY BUILDING

The Exhibition is Being Held From 3 to 6 Each Day—Will Close Next Tuesday Evening

The Ypsilanti Sketch club, a popular organization of a year's standing, are holding their first public exhibit at the Ladies' Library, where from 3 to 6 in the afternoon visitors may see specimens of the work done by the club members, both during and outside the meetings.

The hall in the library building has been given to the club, and on the walls of the two rooms hang the hundred or more sketches and the oil and water color paintings, with a handsome display of china painting and several pieces of carved furniture.

The sketches are samples of the work done at the club meetings, and in view of the time and place of their making they are decidedly clever. A well known Ypsilantian dressed as a German landlord, an athlete wearing his college sweater, an old colored woman, and many another interesting figure drawn by the club members from different angles, look down upon the visitor from the walls of the north room. Six of the club members—Margaret Showerman, Nona King, Roy Parsons, Ralph Gaudy, Norval Ayers and Stephen Ryan—are children, but their work bears comparison with that of the adults, the little people all possessing talent, which can be made to secure notable results if properly developed.

In the south room are the handsome and life-like portraits of Dr. and Mrs. Daniel Putnam, made by the talented artist, Miss Hilda Lodeman, a number of clever water color pictures of outdoor scenes by Mrs. William Gardam, a beautiful exhibit of china and several flower pieces in water colors by Mrs. Ella S. Spencer; a series of studies from life by Miss Nan Olmstead; and fine articles of furniture artistically carved—a mirror frame by Miss Lodeman, a hall chest and a book case by Miss Zoe Kimball and a hall chair and a tabouret by Mrs. B. F. D'Ooge.

The sketches are striking and the more pretentious work is of the highest grade of artistic excellence, attesting to the signal ability of many of the club members.

The exhibition will be closed next Tuesday evening with an auction of the sketches, which is an occasional feature of the club's social sessions, when they entertain their friends.

Three of the most satisfactory poses, that of the German Wirt, the colored woman and a choir boy in his vestments, will be reproduced on postal cards, which the club will use in its business correspondence.

The council will hold a special meeting some evening this week, in all probability, Friday, to close up the business of the year.

It was the custom for many years for the old council to hold the final session on the same evening that the new body came in, but this was illegal, and on the suggestion of E. P. Allen during his last term of office, the practice was abandoned.

CHARGED WITH MANSLAUGHTER

Joseph Scott, colored, a former Ypsilanti resident, who is charged with killing Matthew Smith, of Detroit, by pulling him from his wagon, was bound over to the recorder's court of Detroit, Tuesday, on the charge of manslaughter.

A fellow employee of Scott's swore that the later had told him of committing the deed. Scott's bail was set at $10,000.

Jos. Scott was for several years a chimney sweep in this city and his clown' hat and parti-colored coat, and his wierd cry made him a picturesque character.

THEY'RE WORKING FOR DR. MURRAY

Queen City Hive No. 64 L. O. T. M., of Ypsilanti, are making a determined effort to slect Dr. Ellen B. Murray, one of their number, to the office of great medical examiner for the state order.

Dr. Emma Cook, of Detroit, has held the office for the past eight years, and the Ypsilanti ladies are of the opinion that the time has arrived for a change. They have set forth their views in a circular letter, addressed to the various hives of the state, contending that the great offices should be held in rotation and should not be viewed as the permanent property of any lady.

Dr. Murray, who has been for the past six years examiner for Queen City hive, is a graduate of the Normal and of the University, and has been in active practice in Ypsilanti for seven years. The Queen City hive ladies are her earnest champions in the campaign for the office of great examiner and they have secured her indorsement by Ypsilanti hive No. 631, Willis hive No. 687, Saline hive No. 401, and Milan hive No. 360.

An illustrated magazine of travel and education, twelve numbers, will be sent you if your pay the postage. It will keep you abreast of the times. Send postal for sample copy, and if you like it, send me twenty-five cents for a year's subscription.

CARNEGIE INSTITUTION

Future Plans of the Washington Organization Outlined.

ADDRESS BY PRESIDENT GILMAN.

Directors Perfecting a Scheme of Work and Will Issue a Detailed Statement This Year—Some of the Objects That Are to Be Encouraged.

Dr. Daniel C. Gilman, president of the Carnegie institution and ex-president of Johns Hopkins university, addressed the American Philosophical society the other evening at the session of the annual meeting held in the University of Pennsylvania Museums of Science and Art, says the Philadelphia Times. Dr. Gilman's subject was "The Advancement of Knowledge by the Aid of the Carnegie Institution." He described briefly the object of Andrew Carnegie in giving $10,000,000 for the foundation of the institution and the labors of the trustees of the fund in determining the way in which the income shall be expended.

"I take pleasure in introducing to you a young aspirant for support," began Dr. Gilman. "The Carnegie institution, to which I refer, needs the guidance of all elder institutions of learning. Previous gifts which you can recall have been made for the cause of religion, for the relief of suffering and ailing humanity and for education in the ways of museums. Now is the time when gifts are being made solely for the advance of science. Previously science has been advanced through the universities, the learned societies, the colleges, the museums and the technical schools. Now there are new channels being opened. One is the action of the government in the different departments where investigation and research are being carried on. The biological station at Wood's Holl, in New England, is another and a valuable one. The Institution For Pathological Research, founded by John D. Rockefeller, has a field distinct from the medical schools.

"Now comes a very great gift. It is 150 years from Franklin, the founder of our society, to Carnegie, but the characteristics of both are alike in many respects. One was a philosopher. The other makes no such claim, but he is in sympathy with the philosophers. Some say we cannot use the income from his fund. It is $500,000 a year. Twenty departments could be defined in the institution's scope, and each claims twice the entire income for immediate necessities. The existing state of intellectual activity and advancement demands is.

"The trustees of the fund number thirty, chosen from all parts of the country. Few are what are popularly known as educators. None is at present connected with a college, for the income is to be distributed to no rival claimants.

"The executive committee of seven is now studying out the plans for the institution, and by the early autumn we will draw up a statement of our results. We want ideas from any one about this work. Three or four different ideas pass before us. We might help institutions already founded, such as that at Wood's Holl. We might found institutions for chemical, physical, astronomical or economical research. These would be large ways. Another way would need no large expenditures. Many are engaged in important work where small pecuniary assistance would be very valuable. A little money could be given here or there for an instrument or a piece of apparatus or a small sum of money given outright. It will be extremely difficult to decide just who should get such aid.

"Another field is the publication of memoirs which would otherwise never be printed. A very considerable part of the income might be given to this. Again we might encourage the opening of the government laboratories at Washington to students from colleges and universities. Don't tell me there is money enough to go round. Many who have written me letters will be disappointed. They have heard the founder's desire that those worthy be assisted, and they write, 'I am he.' Some of these manifestations of perverted intellectual activity would make one weep—or laugh.

The main influence of the fund will be turned where it will do the most good. Funds will be advanced where they are most needed. There will be no rivalry between any different ideas; all will work together as Carnegie wished in making the gift.

"I bespeak for the new institution a great patience. The advancement of true knowledge is slow. By making a firm foundation we will be adding to the knowledge of mankind, and it will be of service whether or not it attracts attention. I ask for suggestions that we may have the best thought of the country to help this new institution, unique in the world, the largest gift ever made to the advancement of science."

President Henry S. Pritchett of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology also spoke during the evening on the subject, "The Relation of the American University to Science."

Novel Device For the Injured.

It is reported that a novel and ingenious apparatus for rendering first aid to the injured in street accidents is being tested in Paris. It resembles a pillar letter box and contains a small medicine chest, a folding stretcher and a telephone communicating with the nearest police station. Access to these can be obtained by breaking a glass panel. It is apparently an adaptation of the penny in the slot principle.

BOWSER'S MAGIC EYE

HE SUDDENLY DISCOVERS THAT IT HAS THE POWER TO HYPNOTIZE.

Tries It on the Cat, and the Animal Has a Fit—But It Wasn't His Fault That His Other Experiments Did Not Prove Successful.

[Copyright, 1901, by C. B. Lewis.]

WHEN dinner had been finished the other evening, Mrs. Bowser noticed that Mr. Bowser was looking at her in a strange manner, and when he had continued this for several minutes she asked:

"Have you got a headache or a sore throat this evening?"

"Not a bit of it," he answered.

"Are you puzzled over anything?"

"No."

"Well, your countenance looks as blank as if you had fallen from a haystack and struck on your head. I didn't know but something had happened."

"You needn't worry yourself about my blank countenance, Mrs. Bowser. As a matter of fact, you are not competent to tell when a man's whole soul is in his face or when he has no more feeling than a cabbage head."

"JUST WATCH THAT CAT FOR A MINUTE."

It was policy for her to maintain silence, and he walked up and down for five minutes with his hands crossed under his coattails before he continued:

"A rather queer thing happened at the office this afternoon. A man named Gilbert came in on some business, and the minute I caught his eye I hypnotized him. He was like one in a trance. When I told him to sit down, stand up or walk around, he obeyed me like a child. He would have flung himself out of the window if I had told him to. It's the first time I ever knew that I had hypnotic powers, and the idea rather upsets me. Did you ever suspect that I had this power?"

"Never," replied Mrs. Bowser, with a laugh.

"What in thunder are you giggling about?" he demanded as his ears began to twitch.

"About your hypnotic powers. Did you take this Mr. Gilbert out after the show and treat him?"

"Of course not! What do you mean?"

"I didn't know but he was working you for the drinks."

"Say, woman, you ought to be sent to an asylum for fools!" shouted Mr. Bowser as the blood reddened his face and neck and took away all the blankness. "If I ever start to tell you anything, you always twist it around to make out that I haven't brains enough to chew gum. Did you ever see a case of hypnotism?"

"I don't think so."

"Then don't try to be too funny. I say I hypnotized that man. More than that, I have discovered that I have a great power that way. I can hypnotize you, the cat, the cook, almost any one else. Just watch that cat for a minute."

He sat down with his hands on his knees and fastened his eyes on those of the cat, which was sitting on the floor a few feet away. She glared back at him for a few seconds, and then her eyes began to grow green, her tail to become bushy and her back to arch.

"She'll go mad if you don't stop," cautioned Mrs. Bowser.

"Keep quiet. Don't break the spell," whispered Mr. Bowser as he continued his glare. "She came under the influence sooner than I expected, and it will be a complete success. By George, look at that back! Now watch her while I tell her to jump down and roll over on the floor."

He gave the order, but the cat meowed and spat at him. He repeated it, and she uttered a long drawn yeowl.

"You are driving her mad!" exclaimed Mrs. Bowser as she rose up to flee.

"Shut up! Now, cat, you jump to the floor and roll over. Jump, I say!"

She jumped. She jumped to the piano, clawed off the cover, bounded to the floor, and after a "spit" and a howl she ran down the basement stairs and scared the cook out of her seven senses as she whisked out into the back yard.

"Didn't I tell you I could do it?" exclaimed Mr. Bowser in great glee as he rose up. "That cat will be a beautiful subject to work on, and in less'n a week I'll have her standing on her head and playing all kinds of circus. I will now exercise my powers on you."

"You won't do anything of the kind!" protested Mrs. Bowser, "and you'd also better let the cat alone. She was scared instead of hypnotized."

"Nothing of the sort. She was under the influence as plain as day. Look me in the eye for a minute."

"I shan't do it."

"Look me in the eye. Now raise your right arm."

Mrs. Bowser turned her back on him.

"Now lift your left foot."

No lifting took place, but Mrs. Bowser started down the hall to go upstairs.

"Woman, I command you to return!" shouted Mr. Bowser, but she did not feel the "influence" and passed on out of his sight.

"I'll bring her to it! I'll bring her to it!" he muttered to himself as he turned away. "I've got the power and she feels it, but I'll take her unawares next time. I'll go down and hypnotize the cook."

The cook promptly objected. He had scarcely explained his errand and asked her to fix her eyes on his for a minute when she said:

"I'll do nothing of the sort, and if you don't get out of this kitchen I'll throw up me job."

"But, my dear woman, I wish to carry out an experiment," he pleaded.

"Then carry it out on somebody else. I'm here to do the cooking at $20 a month, and nobody can make a fool of me. I had a brother who was fool enough to look a man in the eye, and he went to the hospital with his legs all tied up in knots."

Mr. Bowser turned away with a sigh, but luck was with him. Just at that moment the basement bell rang and he went to the door to find a traveling tinker who wanted to mend any old tinware.

"Come right in," was the hearty greeting. "I don't think we have anything to mend, but I'd like to explain a matter to you. You have heard of hypnotism, of course?"

"It's where a feller glares at you?" replied the tinker.

"Yes, something that way."

"And you lose your mind and he makes you do as he will?"

"That's it. I think I'm a hypnotist, and I want to experiment a little. You look to me like a good subject, and"—

"No fooling, sir! I'm a hardworking man, and I don't stand for no nonsense."

"Look me in the eye," whispered Mr. Bowser.

"I'll do it, sir, but"—

"Now let yourself seem to sink away as if going to sleep. Keep your eyes on mine."

"Don't get me mad, sir, because when I'm mad I am dangerous."

"Keep quiet, tinker. Now, then, you are in a burning building and must escape by the window. Do you see the flames around you?"

"I do."

"Do you feel the heat?"

"I do."

"Do you realize your peril?"

"I do, sir, and dom me if I'll let any man make a Punch and Judy out of me! Here's for you!"

It was the cook's yells that brought Mrs. Bowser down stairs, and she found Mr. Bowser on his back on the dining room floor in a semiunconscious condition. The tinker had swiped him one on the jaw and got out.

"It was the hypnotism, the hypnotism, missus!" explained the cook as she stood with arms uplifted.

"Yes, it was the hypnotism," whispered Mrs. Bowser as she bent over the recumbent form. "He's got it, and got it bad, and while I'm making a poultice for his jaw you get the camphor and take off his shoes and collar."

"And will he live, mum?"

"Oh, yes, but he won't be a hypnotist any more. He'll probably turn to phrenology." M. QUAD.

SHE FOUND MR. BOWSER ON HIS BACK.

UNCLE ELI'S FABLES.

How the Fox and the Goat Were Saved From a Sad Fate.

[Copyright, 1902, by C. B. Lewis.]

It happened that the Fox and the Goat met behind the stables one day, and, with an anxious look on his face, the goat observed:

"My dear Fox, you come just in time. I am suspicious that there are Wolves about."

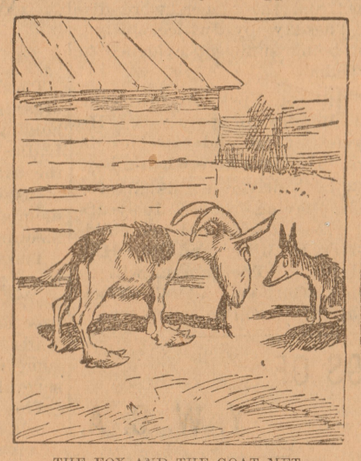
"So?" queried the Fox. "And in what way can I be of service to you?"

"If you will only cross the field to those bushes, you will see tracks in the snow. As near as I can make out, they are the tracks of wolves."

"I haven't a doubt of it."

"But why not go and see and make sure?"

"Because I have no desire to be eaten by the Wolves. May I suggest that you take a walk yourself and carefully examine the tracks?"



THE FOX AND THE GOAT MET.

"I—I would rather be excused. My father was eaten by Wolves, you know, and I have no doubt that it hurt his feelings."

"Then it looks to me as if nothing could be done," said the Fox after awhile.

"No, I don't see that we can do anything," mused the Goat.

"Unless we called upon the Lamb."

"Ah! That might do. Yes, I think the Lamb would be willing to oblige us."

The Lamb, having been called up from the field and the case stated to him, at once announced his willingness to investigate the tracks and set off at once. He speedily found and followed them into the bushes, and a minute later his bleats of distress proved that the Goat's suspicions had been correct.

"Well, they must have been Wolf tracks," said the Fox.

"For sure," replied the Goat.

And then they winked at each other and their faces took on a look of peaceful contentment.

Crushed Under Land Roller.

Eaton Rapids, Mich., April 28.—About 5 o'clock Saturday afternoon Ira Long was killed at his father's farm, two miles northwest of here, while rolling a meadow. The lines became tangled in the roller, wound up and stopped the team. The boy, who was walking behind, had the lines around him and when they caught it drew him under the roller. Mr. Long, noticing the team standing, hurried to the scene, but the lad's life had been crushed.

Rheumatism

Omega Oil

Many people believe Rheumatism is a disease of the blood. Perhaps it is, and perhaps it is not. If it is a blood disease, why is it the pain often stays in the same place? Why is it the blood doesn't always carry the disease all over the body and into every muscle and joint? Your doctor may be able to explain it, but it is all guesswork anyhow. Omega Oil is what you ought to use for Rheumatism. It is to be well rubbed on the place where the pain is. No matter whether the trouble is in the blood or not—Omega Oil goes in, finds it out and cures it. What's the odds so long as you get relief? Drink plenty of fresh water every night and morning while using Omega Oil. The water will keep the kidneys well flushed, and will bring about a quicker cure of Rheumatism. Try this plan for two weeks and see the result.

Schley and Santiago

BY GEORGE EDWARD GRAHAM.

The intrepid Associated Press war correspondent, who was aboard the U. S. S. Brooklyn during the entire five months of the campaign. Illustrated with photographs taken by the Author during the fight.

The Most Sensational Book of the Day.

The true story of the famous cruise of the Flying Squadron under Commodore Winfield Scott Schley, including the blockade and destruction of the Spanish fleet, TOLD FOR THE FIRST TIME.

Contains an autograph endorsement and personal account of the battle by Rear-Admiral Schley.

"The facts of the story of the movements and operations of the Flying Squadron as the author tells them in this book are correct."
—W. S. SCHLEY.

An interesting narrative of facts. Explains the so-called "Retrograde Movement," the "Loop," the "Coaling Problem," and settles conclusively every adverse ruling of the Court of Inquiry.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT, when Governor of New York, said:—"Mr. Graham's story is the best account I have heard or read of the naval fighting during the war. It needed just as much courage to go about taking photographs as it did to work the guns."

THE NEW YORK HERALD says:—"Mr. Graham, in the telling of facts, leaves the reader free to make the deduction that several naval officers need a Court of Inquiry to re-establish their reputations, if they can be re-established."

No subject has ever been before the public that has interested everybody as the manner in which Admiral Schley has been treated, and the American people demand the full recognition of the Hero of Santiago. This book tells everything just as it occurred and as the eyewitnesses saw it. Book is selling like wildfire. Liberal commissions. Outfit and books now ready. Send seven 2-cent stamps for canvassing outfit. ACT QUICK. Now is the time to MAKE MONEY.

Price $1.50, $1.75, $2.25, $2.75, according to style of binding desired.

DAINTY BEDROOMS.

Cretonne Is Much Used Both In City and Country Houses.

An airy, cheerful appearance is one of the essentials of the modern bedroom. It must have large windows, light woodwork and a general absence of the somber draped effects so dear to our mothers.

Cretonne in the heavily ribbed English variety is much used for sleeping apartments both in city and country houses. It is artistic as well as cheap. Very often it is used both to upholster the furniture and to cover the walls. The illustration shows a cretonne room and what is also known as a fitted bedroom. It is so called because it has seats and cupboards fitted into the walls. This is an excellent idea in a small room. The woodwork is white and the cretonne pink and pale green. On each side of the pretty fireplace there are three shelves for books. Instead of a frieze the wall has a series of niches holding graceful bits of jade green ware. To the right closets are built into the wall, and the door of one of these holds a full length mirror.

Everything in this pretty room is planned to economize space.

The crowning joy of womanhood is motherhood and the crowning joy of motherhood is to have healthy children. But there can be no joy in motherhood without health, and without health for the mother there can be no health for the child.

It is of vital importance for women to know that the health of mother and child is in general entirely within woman's control. The thousands of women who have used Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription when expecting motherhood, have testified that it made them healthy and happy in the days of waiting, made the baby's advent practically painless, and gave them health to give their children.

Mrs. W. J. Kidder, of Hill Dale Farm (Enosburg Center), Enosburg, Vt., writes: "During the past year I found myself expecting maternity, and in rapidly failing health. I suffered dreadfully from bloating and urinary difficulty. I was growing perceptibly weaker each day and suffered much sharp pain at times. I felt that something must be done. I sought your advice and received a prompt reply. Took twelve bottles of Doctor Pierce's Favorite Prescription, and also followed your instructions. I began to improve immediately, my health became excellent, and I could do all my own work (we live on a good sized farm). I walked and rode all I could, and enjoyed it. I had a short, easy confinement and have a healthy baby boy."

FIGHT of the WARSHIP MOORE

A FORTIETH ANNIVERSARY WAR STORY

April 24 to 29, 1862

[Copyright, 1902, by G. L. Kilmer.]

CONFEDERATE forts surrendered or abandoned and Confederate ships riddled by Federal shells, driven ashore or blown up constitute the whole picture in nearly all the accepted and popular stories of Farragut's attack on New Orleans. But was it in fact a one sided affair? The Confederate steamer Governor Moore shared the fate of all the others in the end, but there was an exciting interval which lasted longer "than it takes to tell it."

The Moore was a paddle wheel steamship of 900 tons; rigged out for a fighter. She carried two thirty-two pounders and ninety-three men. Her stem had been faced lengthwise with flat railroad iron, bolted on. She had no ramming beak, yet was called a ram. Her machinery was protected by cotton bales packed along the bulwarks from the hold to the upper deck. The morning of April 24, when Farragut's ships dashed past the Confederate forts on the Mississippi below New Orleans, the Moore lay near Fort Philip. Her commander, Lieutenant Beverly Kennon, had learned his trade in Uncle Sam's navy and, feeling a fight in the air, did not close his eyes in sleep, but paced the deck and about 3:30 a. m. noted a bit of a stir down the river.

Steam was up on the Moore in about three minutes, and Kennon slowly backed her away from Farragut's advancing ships, which already filled the channel between the two forts. He wanted to reach a bend up the river where he hoped to turn with sufficient room and headway to ram the foremost ships of Farragut's fleet. By the time the Moore had turned there were two of Farragut's war sloops close at hand—the Oneida, ten guns, and the Cayuga, four guns. Kennon's ship was hailed from the enemy's deck, and he quickly replied, "The United States steamer Mississippi!" The Mississippi was also a paddle wheel steamer, but the distinguishing lights on the Confederate masts defeated the ruse, and the Oneida raked the mysterious black gunboat with a full broadside at close range.

One of the companion rams of the Moore, the General Quitman, lay burning on the opposite side of the channel, and in the glare of her flames Kennon saw a Federal gunboat rushing, as he described it, "up stream like an ocean racer, belching black smoke and firing on each burning Confederate vessel as she passed." This proved to be the United States war sloop Varuna of ten guns and 200 seamen. Without stopping to single out antagonists she delivered fire from both port and starboard guns at once on everything afloat bearing Confederate lights. Kennon knew that that madly racing ship would carry destruction up the river and also that the Moore in her crippled state would be no match for the fleet steadily forging up from below. The smoke of the Varuna's broadsides and of the burning ships she had set in flames, together with the darkness, enabled him to slip away unseen of the foe in the wake of the Varuna. His distinguishing blue light still gleamed from the masthead, and, not daring to lower it the usual way for fear of attracting attention, he seized a musket from a sailor and shattered it to atoms with a well aimed bullet.

In the race up the river the Varuna gained for a time and took no notice of her saucy adversary. In fact the Moore was completely veiled in the smoke and the shadows of the trees lining the bank, which she hugged purposely to baffle pursuit. By using oil in the furnace Kennon soon made enough steam to get within range of the Varuna. It was nearing dawn, and the Moore raked the Varuna along both her port and starboard gangways until she got so close her guns would not bear. The Varuna opened on her pursuer and in the savage running fight had the advantage. Her guns raked the Confederate with horrible carnage. Kennon, finding that his bow gun was too far abaft to admit of depression necessary to strike the Varuna's hull, ran his vessel close upon her and fired through the bulwarks of his own bow. This shot was aimed at the Varuna's engine room, but it landed in a hawse pipe, glancing upward and putting a hole in the smokestack. However it left a clear port for firing through, and a second shot struck the Varuna's pivot gun, exploded and destroyed nearly all the gun's crew.

Now it came to a fight to a finish. The Varuna put her helm to port and fired into the Moore's port bow. The Moore turned to meet the Varuna's move, took the fire and then, under cover of the smoke, quickly put the helm over sharply and crashed into the Varuna near the starboard gangway, receiving her broadside at the moment of striking. The Varuna's engines stopped, and the Moore backed clear, gathered headway and rammed a second time in the same place. Before separating the vessels drifted alongside, and the crews fought with muskets and pistols. Kennon expected to be boarded and loaded his single after gun with canister to meet the emergency. He had no men to board the Varuna. But the commander of the Varuna let the chance go by, and the vessels parted.

At parting with the Moore the Varuna placed five 8 inch shells in the hull of the Confederate, setting her on fire. After a sharp fight with the fresh ram Stonewall Jackson, which she sent ashore in flames, the Varuna was beached to prevent her sinking in deep water. Securely anchored and lashed to the trees, her guns were kept playing upon the Moore until water covered the gun trucks. Meanwhile the Moore dropped down stream past the Varuna, but not answering her shots, for the reason, Kennon said, that his enemy's decks were crowded with helpless wounded people.

It was broad daylight, and the tops of several ships could be seen above the trees. Kennon proposed to drift down and fight the advancing fleet, but his lieutenant exclaimed hotly: "Why do this? We have no men left, and I'll be —— if I stand here to be murdered!" The gallant fellow was already wounded, and Kennon made no protest when he slapped the helm about to go up stream out of danger.

When the Moore put about, the nearest enemy was the Pensacola. Thinking the Moore was aiming to ram her, Pensacola planted a broadside into the luckless Confederate. About the same time the Oneida came up and opened on the Moore. At last the ram was completely crippled. One gun had been dismounted in the last fire. Her boats, her wheel ropes, the head of her rudder, a portion of the engine and a large section of the walking beam had been shot away. The cylinder head had been cracked by falling debris, and the engine room was untenable owing to escaping steam. Several shots had penetrated below the water line, and she was filling with water.

Kennon ran his ship into the bank above the Varuna. She had fought three hours and taken the fire of five war sloops mounting thirty guns. Kennon had picked up his crew at the New Orleans wharfs. Out of ninety-three sixty-one were killed and thirteen wounded. This was, without exception, the heaviest loss by fighting sustained on any single ship during the war.

Four of the five vessels fought by the Governor Moore belonged to the advance division of Farragut's fleet, led by Captain Theodorus Bailey. Captain Bailey's flagship, the Cayuga, delivered her fire in the first contact with the Moore at thirty yards distance. The Oneida raked the ram with her broadside at a distance of a few feet, and at the same time the Pensacola cleared out twelve men at the bow gun of the Moore with shrapnel from howitzers in her tops. The Pinola, which at the same time closed on the Moore, belonged to Farragut's third division.

The Varuna, also of Bailey's fleet, outstripped them all in the race, but the Cayuga, Pensacola and Oneida reached the scene of the last battle between the Moore and Varuna soon after the Varuna was beached. Kennon set fire to his own ship and was the last to leave her. He was taken on board a boat from the Oneida, and in the captain of that sloop, S. P. Lee, he met an old friend and comrade. Afterward he was taken on board the flagship Cayuga and soon encountered Ben Butler, commander of the Federal troops in the New Orleans expedition. Seeing Moore, Butler pointed to him and asked of the ship commander, "Where did you catch him?" Loud enough for Butler to hear Kennon responded, "Where you were not on hand nor your army either."

Farragut accorded to Captain Bailey the privilege of demanding the surrender of the city of New Orleans. Bailey and his first lieutenant proceeded alone to the city hall, but the mayor disclaimed authority to make terms, as did also the military commandant, General Lovell. On the following day, April 26, Captain Albert Kautz of the Hartford, now a rear admiral, went ashore to receive the surrender. The mayor still refused to act, and on the 29th Farragut hauled down the stars and bars and ran up the stars and stripes without the formality of a surrender.

GEORGE L. KILMER.

NEW GOLD DISTRICT.

George W. Walsen Tells of Thunder Mountain Region.

TRAIL SAID TO BE PERILOUS.

Tales of Rich Strikes Told by Salmon City (Ida.) Man—Discovery Was Made by Some Cattle Breeders From Illinois—Much Land Is Still Unclaimed.

Reports of rich finds in the Thunder mountain goldfields, which have startled the country recently, were supported by George W. Walsen of Salmon City, Ida., publisher of the Idaho Recorder, who passed through Chicago recently en route to Washington, says the Chicago Inter Ocean. At the capital he will consult with postoffice department officials regarding mail routes from Salmon City to Thunder mountain, a distance of 108 miles.

Mr. Walsen tells a tale of suffering men frenzied in the rush for gold who are enduring every privation in traversing a country that has never known a government survey. He says the only route to Thunder mountain now open is by stage from Red Rock, Mon., via Salmon City. The stage line is good, but the rush of miners is so great that it can accommodate only a small proportion of them. On account of the great danger of traveling in the mountains at this time of year many fortune seekers have stopped in towns near the goldfields. Here they will wait until the trail is worn down by the more hardy.

"The Caswell boys," says Mr. Walsen, "are the men to whom the credit for the big strike is really due. They come from some little town in Illinois. I don't remember the name. They located on Marble creek, between Salmon City and Thunder mountain, not long ago on a ranch. They began as cattle breeders, but soon after it became known that they had taken to placer mining. They were quiet fellows and went about their business without taking any one into their confidence. Nobody paid much attention to their efforts at first. I know Ben Caswell well, and the other day he told me how he happened to make his big find.

"He and his two brothers were out hunting one day last November, when his eye was suddenly caught by a bit of rock that glittered in the sun. He broke it off and took it home. It assayed at the rate of $2,000 in gold to a ton. Colonel Dewey heard of it and went to the Caswells. He took out a $100,000 bond or option on the claim, to be paid up in three years. He allowed the Caswells the privilege of placer mining on the claim until the bond should be paid.

"Inside of three months the Caswells had cleaned up $21,000. Then Dewey, hearing of their success, paid the bond. In the meantime the Caswells had struck another lead, which they tried to keep hidden. It was on the claim and of course belonged to Dewey if he did not fall down on his bond.

"They put on their snowshoes and traveled miles to the nearest lawyer to see if the bond could not be broken. They were told it could not be. Then they tried to buy back from Dewey the part of the claim on which the second find was located. Failing in this they told him all about it. It was practically throwing it into the bargain, for Dewey might have been years in discovering it for himself. This streak is eleven feet in width and runs as high as $6,000 to the ton. It has made Dewey a rich man in the few weeks he has been operating it.

"But the Dewey mine differs from other Thunder mountain mines only in being the first to attract the attention of fortune seekers. The entire section, covering 625 square miles, is thickly mineralized. It is an immense volcanic deposit, and there is a belt thirty miles one way by over twenty the other in which all the baser metals seem to have been destroyed. Hump hill, about which there has been almost nothing said yet, is an El Dorado in itself.

"Seven thousand claims have already been located, and in every one traces of rich gold have been found. Pittsburg capital to the amount of $3,000,000 has been invested. We expect between 50,000 and 100,000 people to pass through Salmon City to the goldfields this spring, as Boise, Weiser, Moscow, Ketchum and Lewiston, in Idaho; Spokane, Wash., and Butte, Mon., are crowded with strangers waiting for the warmer days of April and May to clear the trails of snow. A new town, Roosevelt, is already laid out.

"Salmon City raised the money by private subscription to open up the stage line. It runs six horse coaches, with relays every twelve miles. The coaches make the distance in eleven hours.

"After Colonel Dewey had paid off his bond he took a stamp mill in packed on the backs of mules. A shaft has been sunk 180 feet, and the ore grows richer with the depth. They have to make a 'clean up' every six hours to keep the gold from choking the plates. The Caswell boys after selling the Dewey claim located another, which they sold the other day for $100,000. F. H. Holcomb has sold ten claims within three weeks that netted him in the neighborhood of $600,000. Of the entire district only four square miles have been staked out yet."

The Japanese government has decided to establish at the industrial experiment station a model factory or technical school for training workers in window glass manufacture. All of the window glass now used in Japan is imported. The importation of window glass in 1899 was valued at $635,500.

HALCYON CLUB'S SUCCESSFUL SEASON

The Halcyon Dancing club closed its second season on Friday evening last with a highly successful party at Light Guard hall, that was attended by 50 couples.

The hall was specially decorated for the occasion and music was furnished by seven pieces from the Finney orchestra of Detroit.

The program of 20 regular numbers and two extras was begun at 9 o'clock, and at 11 the company repaired to the Occidental for supper, returning about midnight to finish the program.

As the party was the last of the series, almost the entire club were present.

The Halcyon club numbered 60 gentlemen this year and was officered as follows: President, G. Howard Gaw; vice president, Howard Brown; secretary, H. B. Britton; treasurer, E. A. Mellencamp.

The patronesses were Mesdames E. A. Lyman, Austin George, F. H. Pease, D. H. Roberts, J. B. VanFossen, C. M. Hemphill, R. W. Hemphill, T. C. Owen, F. A. Barbour, F. A. Todd, C. L. Stevens, M. E. Benedict, R. A. Clifford and D. C. Batchelder.

TO APPOINT SUCCESSORS

Attorney General Oren states that two members of the state board of education must be elected in the fall to succeed P. H. Kelly, of Detroit, and L. L. Wright, of Ironwood, who were appointed by Governor Bliss to fill vacancies caused in one case by the forced resignation of F. A. Platt, of Flint, and in the other by the removal of Prof. E. F. Johnson, of Ann Arbor, to the Philippines.

Attorney General Oren holds that an appointee may not hold the office beyond the next general election, unless no person to fill the vacancy is elected at that time.

FAINTING.

Is it Only a Fashionable Feminine Accomplishment?

In the novels of a generation or so back, fainting seems to be generally regarded as an accomplishment of a fashionable woman. Whenever there was an awkward situation to be covered the woman discreetly and decorously fainted. It is also insinuated that place as well as time had to be considered in the fitting exercise of this accomplishment. There must be a convenient couch to lie on and still more there must be a pair of manly arms to support the limp burden as it swayed and slipped to the ground. Women did not as a rule exhibit this accomplishment for the benefit of their own sex, but only when some observant male was at hand to see and succor.

The heroines of the modern novelist are not given to fainting. The "accomplishment" seems to have gone out with the working of samplers. Weakness was once a woman's weapon. Now she despises weakness, and all its symptoms. It may be taken for granted therefore that now-a-days if a woman faints it is because of genuine weakness that she cannot conceal. Instead of wanting male observation she avoids it and despises herself for her own frailty.

WHY WOMEN FAINT.

In general women who faint are more liable to do so at some special periods than at others, and the liability to faint is generally increased with the recurrences of the periodic womanly function. From this fact alone it might be fairly argued that there is a close relation between local womanly weakness and the physical weakness which causes women to faint. Womanly ailments surely undermine the general health. Irregularity, suppression, profusion, unhealthy drains, inflammation, ulceration, and female weakness, are the diseases which drain the vitality and weaken the general health of women and render them liable among other things to "fainting spells." Cure the local womanly diseases and there is at once a gain in the general health.

"It gives me great pleasure," writes Miss Ella Sapp, of Jamestown, Guilford Co., N. C., "to thank Dr. Pierce for the great good received from the use of his 'Favorite Prescription' and 'Golden Medical Discovery.' I had suffered for three years or more at monthly periods. It seemed as though I would die with pains in my back and stomach. I could not rise to my feet at all without fainting; had given up all hope of ever being cured, when one of my friends insisted upon my trying Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. With but little faith I tried it, and before I had taken half a bottle I felt better, had better appetite and slept better. Now I have taken two bottles of 'Favorite Prescription' and one of 'Golden Medical Discovery,' and am happy to say I am entirely cured, and all done in two months' time when all other medicines had failed to do any good at all."

WEAK WOMEN MADE STRONG.

Doctor Pierce's Favorite Prescription makes weak women strong and sick women well. It does not matter how great is the weakness or how chronic the sickness, "Favorite Prescription" may be used with the utmost confidence and assurance that it will cure and strengthen if the disease lies within the bounds of a medicinal cure. In many a case where local physicians have said there was no aid in medicine and pointed to a hazardous operation as the only alternative to a life of suffering, the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription has resulted in a perfect and permanent cure. It is such cures as these which have given "Favorite Prescription" pre-eminence among medicines for the cure of woman's diseases.

"I suffered for twelve years with female trouble," writes Mrs. Milton Grimes, of Adair, Adair Co., Iowa, "which brought on other diseases—heart trouble, Bright's disease, nervousness, and at times would be nearly paralyzed. Had neuralgia of stomach. I can freely say your medicines (nine bottles in all, five of 'Favorite Prescription,' four of 'Golden Medical Discovery' and two vials of Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets), have cured me. I can work with comfort now, but before I would be tired all the time and have a dizzy headache, and my nerves would be all unstrung so I could not sleep. Now I can sleep and do a big day's work, something I had not done for over eleven years before.

"You have my consent to publish this testimonial, hoping it will be the means of helping some other invalid."

WOMEN ARE THE WITNESSES.

It is the women who have acclaimed Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription as the greatest and best medicine for the cure of womanly diseases. The witnesses to its power are the women it has cured. There are hundreds of thousands of healthy women to-day who have been restored by "Favorite Prescription" to a happy, useful life after years of suffering, and years of useless medical treatment. If you are suffering from any disease peculiar to women there is every motive for you to try Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and every encouragement to expect a complete cure. No matter how severe the disease, the wonder will be not that "Favorite Prescription" cures you, but that it should fail to do so. Its cures are so uniform, so reliable, that if it did not cure you, you would stand alone, a wonder and a marvel, a solitary exception among hundreds of thousands of weak women who have been made strong and sick women who have been made well by the use of this great remedy.

"Favorite Prescription" establishes regularity, dries weakening drains, heals inflammation and ulceration, and cures female weakness. As a tonic and nervine for weak, worn-out, run-down women, it is without an equal. It promotes the appetite, tranquilizes the nerves and induces refreshing sleep.

If you are led to the purchase of "Favorite Prescription" because of its remarkable cures of other women, do not accept a substitute which has none of these cures to its credit.

A HELP FOR WOMEN.

"I received the 'Medical Adviser' and am much obliged for it," writes Mrs. Elmer D. Sheare, of Mount Hope, Lancaster Co., Pa. "I would not part with it if I could not get another in its place, as it is a help every woman should have."

DESTRUCTION OF FLOWER BEDS

Students Accused of Appropriating Choice Blossoms

TWO GIRL STUDENTS

They Were Caught in the Act of Robbing a Flower Bed by the Owner—Were Let go After a Reprimand

The regular spring depredations on the flower beds of the city have been begun by students and others, and the indignant growers of choice blossoms have decided to form an association dedicated to the purpose of capturing and convicting the thieves.

If the plan is carried out funds will be raised to employ detectives who will watch at different gardens, to give chase to any would-be marauders. If any of the thieves are captured they will be given the full extent of the law, whatever their station or influence.

Normal students have in the past been detected in these acts of petty thievery, and one year flower stealing was a fad among the co-eds, who vied with one another in taking daring risks in their operations.

Two prominent young lady students were over bold one evening, and they were captured by the owner of the flowers after a brief but exciting race, and were taken back by him to the house. His wife was entertaining a large company, and without regard to their protests and tears, the thoroughly frightened and ashamed captives were led inside to the light, so that there could be no mistake in regard to their identity. The company were attracted by the confusion, and they crowded around the trembling co-eds, who were almost overcome by their sense of utter disgrace. It was all in fun, they pleaded, but the indignant owner of the flowers was obdurate, insisting upon accompanying them to their rooms, that he might have no difficulty in locating them in the future. The matter was brought before the college faculty, and there was strong talk of publicly humiliating the girls and expelling them, but beyond severe reprimands they escaped.

For the remainder of the year there was very little flower stealing by students or town people, and for some time the blossoms were comparatively safe, but every year now witnesses an increased number of the depredations, and the thieving will probably go on until some one is captured and brought into court.

There are no evidences so far this spring to tell whether the marauders are college men or girls or town talent.

CEMENT WALKS ORDERED

The council have opened the spring campaign for cement walks, having ordered eight as follows: A five-foot walk on the east side of Ballard street, corner of Emmet; five-foot walk on west side of Ballard street, corner of Cross; five-foot walk on the west side of Ballard street, at No. 311; six-foot walk on south side of W. Cross street, adjoining the property of the First Baptist church; six-foot walk on the east side of Huron street, from the corner of Cross street to the property line of Garry Densmore; six-foot walk on the south side of W. Cross street from Huron street to the Baptist church; six-foot walk on the west side of Huron street, adjoining the Whitley estate property; five-foot walk on the south side of Maple street, adjoining the property of the Spaulding estate, M. M. Reed, T. Thompson and Mrs. G. Shipman.

PROTEST AGAINST ADAMS ST. CURBING

The Michigan street property owners are preparing to fight against the proposed curbing from Adams street to Washington street, which was voted by the council at their last meeting. A remonstrance will be presented to the aldermen next Monday and if it is disregarded the property owners will apply for an injunction.

"We have a big majority of the frontage," said one of the property owners, "and we purpose to prevent the laying of that curbing. The council ordered the curbing in face of the fact that only a small portion of the frontage was represented in the petition, and we who are opposed to it do not consider such a proceeding fair treatment."

The council have ordered the curbing laid and unless they reconsider the matter the contract will be let.

N GROSVENOR SAYS:

Peruna is an Excellent Spring Catarrh Remedy---I am as Well as Ever."

HON. DAN. A. GROSVENOR, OF THE FAMOUS OHIO FAMILY.

Hon. Dan. A. Grosvenor, Deputy Auditor for the War Department, in a letter written from Washington, D. C., says:

"Allow me to express my gratitude to you for the benefit derived from one bottle of Peruna. One week has brought wonderful changes and I am now as well as ever. Besides being one of the very best spring tonics it is an excellent catarrh remedy."

DAN. A. GROSVENOR.

In a recent letter he says:

"I consider Peruna really more meritorious than I did when I wrote you last. I receive numerous letters from acquaintances all over the country asking me if my certificate is genuine. I invariably answer, yes."---Dan. A. Grosvenor.

A County Commissioner's Letter.

Hon. John Williams, County Commissioner, of 517 West Second street, Duluth, Minn., says the following in regard to Peruna:

"As a remedy for catarrh I can cheerfully recommend Peruna. I know what it is to suffer from that terrible disease and I feel that it is my duty to speak a good word for the tonic that brought me immediate relief. Peruna cured me of a bad case of catarrh and I know it will cure any other sufferer from that disease."—John Williams.

Miss Mattie L. Guild, President Illinois Young People's Christian Temperance Union, in a recent letter from Chicago, Ill., says:

"Doubt if Peruna the remedies recommended to-day for catarrh of the system. A remedy that will cure catarrh of the stomach will cure the same condition of the mucous membrane anywhere. I have found it the best remedy I have ever tried for catarrh, and believing it worthy my endorsement I gladly accord it.--Mattie L. Guild.

A Congressman's Letter.

Hon. W. P. Brownlow, Congressman from Tennessee, writes from Washington, D. C., the following:

"I have suffered from catarrh of the stomach for several years, and for the past twelve months was in an exceedingly critical condition. My attention was called to your Peruna, and I began to use it, and my improvement was noticeable after the first three days. I have taken three bottles of the medicine and I feel satisfied that I am now almost, if not permanently, cured. In connection with the Peruna, I have used your Manalin for biliousness and torpid liver. I regard it as the best medicine for this purpose that I have ever used. Having been benefited so much myself, I give you this statement, that others may be likewise benefited."—W. P. Brownlow, M. C., Jonesboro, Tenn.

Mrs. Elmer Fleming, orator of Reservoir Council No. 168, Northwestern Legion of Honor, of Minneapolis, Minn., writes from 2535 Polk street, N. E.:

Mrs. Elmer Fleming, Minneapolis, Minn.

"I have been troubled all my life with catarrh in my head. I took Peruna for about three months, and now think I am permanently cured. I believe that for catarrh in all its forms Peruna is the medicine of the age. It cures when all other remedies fail. I can heartily recommend Peruna as a catarrh remedy."—Mrs. Elmer Fleming.

Treat Catarrh in Spring.

The spring is the time to treat catarrh. Cold, wet winter weather often retards a cure of catarrh. If a course of Peruna is taken during the early spring months the cure will be prompt and permanent. There can be no failures if Peruna is taken intelligently during the favorable weather of spring.

As a systemic catarrh remedy Peruna eradicates catarrh from the system wherever it may be located. It cures catarrh of the stomach or bowels with the same certainty as catarrh of the head.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

Address Dr. Hartman, President of The Hartman Sanitarium, Columbus, Ohio.
